Welcome to the CEE Faculty Development Program!

The Center for Excellence in Education (CEE) is a partnership between MaxKnowledge and the Imagine America Foundation. The CEE’s Faculty Development Program is based on a training cycle approach and is designed to take faculty members through a core of MaxKnowledge online education courses as well as a schedule of blended online and onsite activities. The activities are facilitated by an onsite champion who works closely with campus faculty and with the CEE staff to collaboratively achieve real teaching performance outcomes and to help transfer the instructor learning experience to the classroom. The program is customizable to each institution’s faculty training needs and is totally oriented to the career education setting.

The MaxKnowledge online courses, at the heart of the program, address such areas as instructional planning and delivery, teaching methodologies, interactive learning, classroom management, adult learning styles and student retention. Courses are facilitated by expert trainers and are asynchronous, allowing participants to complete them on their own schedule. Each course also provides four hours of continuing education credit.

The annual CEE Faculty Development Program provides the opportunity for faculty members to complete up to three courses, or twelve hours of continuing education, per year including all blended online and onsite activities. The program also provides the opportunity for faculty and their champions to document individual progress through the courses and activities.

Your campus champion, or faculty coach, will tell you more about the program’s components.

Best wishes for your faculty development journey!
